HOW IT WORKS

You can view annotations (globally or per-document) in a list, instead of manual-ly going through every page in a physical production to see highlights and read com-ments. Via this list you can jump directly to the selected highlight and comment with-in the document viewer. You can now find that single key sentence in a 300-page document with just one click.

Illuminate changes the way your team produces documents, to decrease time spent on post-production review and on locating key information. You can now produce just the relevant pages within documents, by only producing pages with highlights, in a streamlined production. You can also embed highlights and comments directly within the produced documents, or produce these details as cover sheets, leaving the original document in its pristine original form. This provides richer detail and context down to a single sentence, instead of having docu-ment wide comments that can be difficult to reference. ∎
